A Marriage of Science and Intuition

Bio-Functional Energetic Medicine

Different Options

Recently I received an inquiry from someone looking for a medical intuitive, wanting to know how I worked. I thought I would take this opportunity to share with all of you how my work has progressed over the years, and how I can best serve regarding your physical health and other issues. When it comes to our health we have choices to consider.

- One is doing nothing and waiting for things to happen, consulting a traditional western MD when problems occur.
- Another is paying attention to our health, doing those things that promote longevity - including availing yourself of the services of complementary modalities.

A new field of medicine gaining increased awareness is Functional Medicine - an evidence based approach involving thorough testing and comprehensive natural treatment. This very effective approach is unfortunately not covered by insurance resulting in hefty bills, often for thousands of dollars.

What Does Babinetics Bring to the Mix?

In my late teens I discovered the ability to attune to someone's physical imbalance and then go into nature to identify the plant or plants that would address imbalances and restore wellbeing. Through all my work in structural alignment, humanistic psychology, Chinese medicine and other energetic medicine modalities I have use the same intuitive ability to identify what is going on and how to best restore optimal health and wellbeing.

Challenges and Opportunities

With the onset of my late wife's diagnosis of cancer I was directed to start exploring the fields of biology and physiology. This has resulted in over 20 years of intense study in Functional Medicine covering many disciplines and specific strategies of testing and treatments. I am presently completing my Certification in Functional Medicine from FMU Functional Medicine University - a twelve module study and exams in the foundational issues of health.

A New Approach

I have used that background plus my intuitive ability to create a functional analytic framework that enables me to identify the functional causes of specific conditions and identify the best naturopathic strategies to correct imbalances and enhance the body's ability to take care of itself. Because of this, I can bypass many of the costly tests.

Optimizing Health

Health is predicated on the proper functioning off the four physical dynamics: absorption, transformation, detoxification and protection. There are many factors impacting that foundation: toxicity, fungus, parasites, microbes, mycoplasmas, lack of absorption, amino acid deficiencies, patterns of over-sensitivity to food and the external environment. Functional medicine calls these "functional loads" because they interfere with the important function of homeostasis, the natural ability of the body to sustain our health and wellbeing. Both the foundation of health and the functional loads are most frequently ignored by traditional western medicine. In working with individuals to optimize their health, I use my intuition to explore the whole physiological terrain until the inner connections to the dysfunctions and/or imbalances are clear, leading to corrective treatments which can be validated through long lasting results.

Maintaining Health is Easier than Correcting Diseases

If you are dealing with digestive issues, tiredness, weight gain, lack of motivation, chronic inflammation, allergies, frequent infections, headaches, hormonal imbalance or lack of sleep - or if you just want to see if there is anything we could improve, please do not delay. As we say, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."
